Saturday Special Keynote Presentation

Dr. Jean Clinton

This full-day presentation explores the developing brain and the crucial role relationships with others play in healthy development. In the past decade, and more, the role of the environment, both physical and emotional, has led to a deeper understanding of what young children need in the early years to thrive. Relationships that are warm, responsive, and predictable help our children thrive. Positive relationships can help children manage their emotions during times of stress and support them in developing appropriate coping and resiliency skills.
